SOUND TAPS TO-DAY AT BELL'S BURIAL

Guardsmen Will Meet Funeral Cortège at Arlington.

Funeral services for Lieut. Col. James E. Bell, retired, D. C. N. G., and superintendent of Substation A, city post-office, who died Tuesday night at his home, 3033 Dent place, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Trinity Episcopal Church.

Services will be conducted by Rev. Richard P. Williams, pastor of the church, of which Col. Bell was a vestryman for thirty years.

Postmaster Merritt and officers of his department will attend the services, as will also officers of the District National Guard and members of the various rifle teams to which Col. Bell belonged. Delegations from Dawson Lodge, No. 10, Masons, and Washington Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templars, will attend the funeral.

A firing squad, made up of members of the brigade rifle teams of the District Guard, commanded by Lieut. T. F. McAnally, will meet the funeral cortège at Oak Hill Cemetery and fire a final volley over the grave. "Taps" will be sounded by a bugler from the Second Infantry, D. C. N. G.

Resolutions of sympathy and condolence on Col. Bell's death were sent to the family following a meeting of the officers of the Post-office Department, which was held in Postmaster Merritt's office yesterday afternoon, and the following order was given out at the National Guard headquarters:

"All officers of the National Guard of the District of Columbia are invited to attend the funeral of the late Lieut. Col. James E. Bell, Inspector of small arms practice, National Guard of the District of Columbia, at the Trinity Episcopal Church, Third and C streets northwest, at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, December 1, 1910. Dress uniform, overcoats, and side arms will be worn."

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

I HAD a most interesting evening last night. Let me tell you about it. The little stenographer lady brought her newest chum to call on me. I had heard a good deal about this personage. She is a new stenographer in the office. She came from a distant city. She was, according to Molly's advance notices, a most superior person. This was nothing unusual for Molly, whose own exceptional qualities are only exceeded by her humility, is constantly discovering superior persons. Having seen some of them before and smiled at Molly's wistful admiration of something not half so fine as she, I thought I was prepared for this one. But I was mistaken. She exceeded all my expectations.

She entered my study with an air of conferring an inestimable favor upon both Molly and me. Having seated herself in an inestimable chair and gazed nonchalantly about the room with an appraising eye and a gold lorgnette stare, she opened up with a lofty denunciation of "those horrid trolley cars we came over on. Really," she assured me, "nothing but the pleasure of seeing you and Molly would have made me ride in them. So unpleasant, you know, to have to sit crowded in with all those horribly common people. Where do the nice people of the suburbs ride?"

While I was recovering from this, her roving eye lit upon a bit of old delft-ware in my cabinet, and at once she recognized an opportunity. "What a dear little pitcher. My aunt would so love that. She has a large collection, several thousand pieces. She is quite crazy about old china, really neglects her family to tour about the country in her car collecting it. I don't know what uncle would do if he didn't have his stables to amuse him. He has some very beautiful blooded horses, you know."

I didn't know, and felt a terrible desire to say so, but for Molly's sake forbore.

A mention of her long journey to the city was an occasion for the recounting of a singularly trying experience. "From Cleveland to Chicago, my dear, they had no chair car, a misunderstanding, I believe, and I actually had to ride all that distance in a day coach. So unpleasant. I don't know what mother would have said if she had known that was going to happen."

This is just a sample of the conversation, to give you the idea. It continued in this strain about two hours. I felt most edified, but the one drawback was that I wanted to know how Molly was taking it. I like my friends with a sense of humor, and I didn't like to think Molly might not have one. At her friend's mention of the reasonable $90 suit, I thought I saw a smile hover about Molly's lips, but it might have been merely the firelight playing with Molly's mouth, which is just what any sensible firelight would want to do.

But when the newest chum was putting on her furs, and holding forth to mother on the wretchedness of the fire at her boarding-house, "actually no salad course," my chance to end this suspense came.

"Molly," I murmured, "what I want to know is, do some people really convince themselves by what they say?"

"Oh, Ruth," cried Molly, with a laugh that was no mirage. "How could she?" and then almost a wall. "She never was like that before."

"Never mind, Molly," I comforted. "You can bring me the next one."

FAIRBANKS PLANS VISIT WITH TAFT

Former Vice President to Discuss Politics.

Former Vice President Fairbanks has been invited to Washington to remain several days as the house guest of President Taft. Mr. Fairbanks will arrive about December 10 to attend the Gridiron Club dinner, to be given one week from next Saturday night. The President, learning of Mr. Fairbanks' intended visit, took occasion to play the role of host.

There is much speculation as to the political significance of Mr. Fairbanks' visit. It is understood that he will discuss with the President plans for rehabilitating the Republican party in Indiana.

It is said on behalf of the former Vice President that he would accept no office. It is understood that Mr. Fairbanks was offered the post of Ambassador to Great Britain early in the Taft administration and declined. Also it is known that he has declined one or two important special diplomatic missions.

President Taft worked until 3 o'clock yesterday morning on his message, but just the same he got up early and started in again with Secretary Norton to complete the document. Through his use of the pruning knife yesterday and his close examination of the estimates of the departments last night, the President, it was said at the White House yesterday, has succeeded in reducing the total estimates by about $14,000,000.

It is not known what estimates he cut, but the President has taken a little bit off each department, among them estimates for more public buildings.

It was said yesterday that the President will finish the message by Saturday. Beginning next week he will consult leaders in both Houses of Congress about legislation which may be sought at the coming session. As soon as he has determined what measures shall be pushed this year, Mr. Taft will turn his attention to the Supreme Court and other judicial appointments.

The President spent yesterday morning in his private library in the White House. President McCrea, through his son, the Railroad, was practically the only visitor admitted. Mr. McCrea said his call was purely personal. Business, Mr. McCrea said, is marking time. "Every man should judge for himself what the future will be," said Mr. McCrea.

Representative Sereno Payne called at the executive offices, but did not see the President. Asked about the legislation to be expected at the coming session, he said: "Anybody's guess is as good as mine."

GET CHRISTMAS PAY DAY.

School-teachers and members of the police and fire departments will be given an additional pay day in December in order that they may be prepared for their Christmas shopping.

With the approval of the Commissioners, Lyle C. Wilson, disbursing officer, has decided that they shall receive a half month's salary between December 15 and 20, the exact date not being determined. The teachers will receive $7,000; the policemen $4,000, and the firemen $21,000.

CROWDS AT FUNERAL FOR SALVATIONIST

Loss of Maj. Marian Smalley Mourned by the Poor.

FLOWERS PILED HIGH ON BIER

Impressive Service Attracts Thousands of Persons from Every Walk of Life and Band Intones Chopin Funeral March Outside Church. Tribute Paid by Gen. Duffin.

Last rites for Maj. Marian Smalley, matron of the American Salvation Army home, were held in First Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon in the presence of a great throng of mourners representing every walk of life.

Flowers were piled high on the bier, many an unpretentious little piece having been sent by some anonymous toiler in the slums whom the brave worker had befriended in an hour of sorrow. News of her death had spread far among the poor and lowly, and in their humble way they paid tribute to her memory. For nearly four years she had worked among this class, had been beloved by them for her good works, and in this last hour they tried to show how deeply they were stricken and how irreplaceable was their loss.

Funeral March Played.

The impressive funeral service was conducted by Rev. Donald C. MacLeod, assisted by Rev. Joseph T. Kelly, of the Fourth Presbyterian Church. While it was in progress a band intoned the Chopin funeral march outside, and as the cortege formed in line it headed the carriages to Capital City Cemetery.

A beautiful tribute to the character of Maj. Smalley was delivered by Gen. James William Duffin, of the Philadelphia Salvation Army. He told of her life consecrated to the poor, the lowly, and those to whom the flash of the World's Good had been vouchsafed. More than 4,000 persons had been given refuge in the Salvation Army home in the last year, and all of them had been given some new stimulus and inspiration by Maj. Smalley, said Gen. Duffin. She was "the good she has done is her true monument," he added; "and nothing that we can do will add one jot or tittle to it. She is one of the women who have given this great army of salvation its proud and honored name."

Children at Service.

There were many children at the service—children whose tears Maj. Smalley had by her sunny personality, washed away and turned to laughter, and whose young hearts had been relieved of their burdens.

The pallbearers were Staff Capt. Sheridan Wade, Adj. Houtz, Capt. Louis Smith, Capt. Gaines, all of Philadelphia; Maj. John Rhodes, of Baltimore, and Capt. Carter, of the City of Washington. At the grave was simple and in keeping with the wishes of the deceased.

HEARD IN JOINT RECITAL.

Misses Larrabee and Hardman Give Rather Unique Concert.

Miss Florence Larrabee, pianist, and Miss Florence Hardman, violinist, were heard in joint recital yesterday afternoon in the Columbia Theater, at the second in the Radcliffe course of the season's concert.

The concert was unique in many ways. It was a delightful programme and was given by two young women not known here. The violinist, Miss Hardman, is a young girl, being still in short frocks, but is a gifted musician. She has a clear, brilliant technique, which might well be the envy of many older artists. Some of her numbers were a little too ambitious for her attainments, but the ambition and the really skillful performance of some things of the violin deserves great commendation.

Miss Hardman's tone and technique were a delight to piano lovers. Everything she attempted was played with much skill and finish, and seldom has a more perfect trill and trill and a more lured, pearly scale.

The MacDowell "Concert Etude" was particularly effective and the Chopin "Prelude" was beautifully done. The programme, which is not received the enthusiasm it deserved, was as follows:

- Allegro, andante, allegro-allegretto.
- (a) Harp Solo. Miss Larrabee.
- (b) "Mazurka." Scherzino.
- (c) Berceuse. Chopin.
- (d) Concert Etude. MacDowell.
- (e) Andante from M. Sonata (violin alone).
- (f) Cradle Song. J. S. Bach.
- (g) Fantasy "Missa" on G string. Paganini.
- (h) Gondoliers. Miss Florence Hardman.
- (i) Tarantelle. Miss Larrabee.
- (j) The Round of the Goblins. Barzani.
- (k) Miss Hardman.

ABRAHAM OPPENHEIM DEAD.

Merchant Who Tried to End Life Again Calls for Aid.

New York, Nov. 30.—Abraham Oppenheim, a merchant, who on August 7, 1907, telephoned from his rooms, at the Hotel Bellevue, that he was ill, and was found to have shot himself in the right eye, telephoned to the Bellevue management from his room, on the ninth floor of the hotel, this morning that he was ill.

To a maid who answered the call he said he was dying, and asked for a doctor. His brother, Dr. Albert Oppenheim, summoned Dr. Henry Wolfe. Mr. Oppenheim died within an hour.

Coroner Feinberg says that angina pectoris was the cause of death. He granted a burial permit, and the body was removed to an undertaking establishment. His brother-in-law, said Mr. Saxe, had been troubled with heart disease for almost a year.

When Oppenheim attempted to kill himself in 1907 he was in a clothing firm, and pending his convalescence a petition in bankruptcy was filed against him. He was forty-four years old, and the son of A. D. Oppenheim, a retired merchant, who once owned the Belknap Hotel. Mr. Oppenheim had just obtained a contract from the city for some flooring for tenement houses.
